the Editor's Desk —

This issue of "Numisma" features Canadian and British North American Coins and Tokens. Until April 15th, 1957, we can allow a discount on orders over $100.00, a 10% discount on orders over $200.00. This applies to decimal coins only.

In response to numerous requests, the next few "Numisma's" will be devoted to Mail Bid sales. These little unrestricted offerings have been highly popular, most probably because of the numerous realizations obtained by many bidders.

The "Question Forum" is stronger than ever in this issue. Keep the questions coming; we can at least try to handle the tough ones!

THE QUESTION FORUM

We invite our readers to submit any questions or problems relating to U. S., American or Canadian Coins, Medals, Tokens, Literature, etc., including Restrikes and similar material. The questions of most general interest will be answered in detail here; others will receive written replies on receipt of a stamped self-addressed envelope.

Ques. What about the 1937 Nickel and Cent with reeded edge? Were these made that way in the Mint or was some dealer or collector responsible for them? If the latter, why are they listed in the red book? J. H. McG., Norristown, Pa.

A. Until recently we believed the old story that Ira Reed (Philadelphia dealer) had these manufactured out of ordinary plain-edge coins. But since then we have heard an emphatic first-hand report from one of America's greatest collectors that he was in his shop in Philadelphia and saw a package from the Mint opened and proved to contain 100 nickels and 100 cents with reeded edges. Obviously they must have been pieces de caprice, and it is not the first time (nor the last) that this sort of thing happened. If our collector's recollection is accurate, then the 1937 reeded-edge coins are new though still of dubious status along with the 1863 reeded-edge Cent (A.W. 425) and similar fancy productions. Incidentally, the 1937 reeded-edge minor coins were "the big thing" at the 1941 A.S.A. Convention in Philadelphia.

Ques. I have an 1823 restrike Cent in silver. How rare is it? How were they made and when? How much is it worth? F. S., Bluefield, W. Va.

A. As nearly as we can ascertain, these were made in 1879, presumably by Capt. J. W. Haseltine, who owned the dies. twelve were supposedly struck, and the infrequency of occurrence makes this figure highly probable. Waldo Newcomer supposedly $50. for his example, forty years ago, and others are reputed to brought as high as $175.00. The last one we know of that went to auction was bid up to $110.00. A piece of this sort is worth as much as a customer will pay for it; we know of no rational basis for pricing it.

Ques. Why are the 1799 and 1837 Half Eagles offered so low in comparison with other dates of the same type despite the red book valuations? M. M. W., Menasha, Wisc.

Ans. Low mintage appears to have had something to do with it in the case of the 1799. There are three distinct types: small stars with 4 or 5 berries, large rev. stars with 5 berries only; obv. and nine rev. dies making nine varieties in all, none of them common. Of 1798 there are seven varieties with large eagle, but only three are far more common; of 1800 three of the five varieties are fairly common. The 1802-12 were minted in larger quantities. The 1837 presents more of a puzzle, and we suspect that most of it made in that year bore the date 1836. There are two types: comparatively common large date, and the extremely rare small date, the latter discovered by the late David M. Bullowa and by him published and illustrated in the October, 1949, NUMISMATIST, 612. We know of only two examples.

Ques. Why were the early Lincoln Cent proofs matte or sandblast instead of brilliant? Why was this style discontinued? Why are they usually so badly spotted, and can they be successfully cleaned? R. A. B., Indianapolis, Ind.

Ans. The so-called matte proofs (also spelled matt and matted) were made by pickling the finished coins in dilute acid at the Mint. Sandblast proofs were made, as the name implies, by use of a stream of fine sand under compressed air. The latter process seems to have been confined to silver (1916-35) and gold (1912-15) proofs; several variations on the matte process appeared on gold proofs of 1907-12 and the nickel and bronze proofs of 1909-16. All these processes are supposedly of French origin. Though no documented evidence is known to us, we suspect that the concavity of fields on the new coinage designs from 1907 to 1916 in all metals was the reason for the abandonment of the old brilliant proof finish. It would be much more difficult to burnish a die whose fields were unevenly curved or rounded, than to burnish one of the old-fashioned dies with its practically plane surfaces. The unsatisfactory quality of the matte proofs from 1936 on bears this hypothesis out. Note that the old brilliant proofs have the designs frosty and the fields burnished, whereas in the new proofs the whole is about equally shiny with detail relief on the high surfaces. The long hiatus (1916-35) counts for the Mint personnel forgetting the old proof manufacturing methods. The silver proofs between 1916 and 1935 were mostly Commemoratives manufactured to order—fifty Hawaiians, only three each of certain other issues (Grant Star, Vancouver, San Diego etc.). There are also known one or two similar proofs of the new type silver and the 1921 and 1922 Peace Dollars. Lincoln proofs, 1909-16, are generally discolored or spotty because of the sulphur content of the old Mint wrappers, where they sometimes lay for years. Cleaning is risky; we have seen several methods used (none too reliable) including electrolysis, cloudy ammonia, and various commercial dips. No really satisfactory method is known to us for cleaning bronze or copper proofs, though cloudy ammonia is excellent for nickels. In general an oil dip is safer than any method that involves rubbing the coin in any way (such as the baking soda paste sometimes recommended), as even light rubbing will leave "hairlines" on the fields. Toning of a copper or bronze coin, even a proof, that has been cleaned, can be accelerated by gentle heating in air (e.g. on paper over a 200-watt bulb), or even better, by prolonged exposure to sunlight. Any of these methods should be approached only with extreme caution, first being tried on worthless modern coins, and used only in emergencies. The safest thing is to buy coins that do not need such attention, and then leave them alone. We cannot recommend it too often: leave cleaning to the experts.

Ques. Why do so many early American silver coins show marks? Why do dealers insist on calling them "adjustment" marks?

Q If the planchets were filed down as they say, how can I tell kind of file marks from injuries that happened after the coins the Mint? D. P., Toledo, Ohio.

Ans. A little attention to minting processes will make it clear. Metal was brought into the Mint, melted, refined and brought to standard 900 fine, cast into ingots which were rolled down into strips the width of several coins and the thickness of a finished coin; planchets fell from the cutting presses into hoppers from which they went to the old ladies kept on the Mint payrolls as "adjusters" (the official title actually used). These wore leather aprons and carried files. All planchets were weighed once; lightweight ones went back to remelting, correct ones went to the upsetting machine which produced the raised rim and lettered edge, heavy ones were given a couple of strokes apiece with the files and then reweighed. The metal filings went into the aprons and the daily accumulations were melted. Obviously the Mint would lose money by releasing overweight coins, so the expense of keeping "adjusters" was justified. Now if a coin were mutilated by filing down after striking, the file marks would be heavier on the raised parts than in the fields, whereas true adjustment marks this is not so; the file marks run their parallel courses without apparent intensification or spreading in fields on high surfaces. A coin's value is not really impaired by adjustment marks.

Ques. Do you think that Friedberg 1250, 1262-3, 1319, 1323 only specimens or essays, or genuine varieties of the regular issue, manufactured fake rarities? Are any of them unique? M. R., Camden, Ark.

Ans. F-1319 and 1323 and the unlisted variety 1318a (surge 18 63 and S) are authentic varieties. Possibly a half dozen of the last are known; two of the first and probably not over two of 1323 are known to us. Off-collar seals such as F-1260, 1262, 1300, 1304-5 we have seen one to three examples of (except 1262 which we have never encountered); we would be inclined to distrust a specimen offered unless it were in strictly mint state, as processes are known for making chemical changelings. However, some variation in color (pink to dark red) is found on many issues, and it is difficult to assign a valuation to the variants. Our listings in "Numisma" a few months back were based on the numbers seen among many thousands of specimens, and the examples then in stock were free of any evidence of chemical tampering. Valentine (1924) found several such, characterizing them as of great rarity. F-1250 we have never seen, and it may be an error (Old English text C instead of T, which is similarly shaped) or a misidentification. F-1263 may be a proof, or anything else; we have never seen it. We would much like to examine a specimen we could be sure was not a similar example faded and discolored.
